Thanks for your help, Chris, so long ago. Can't believe you're gone. Go with God my friend, be seeing you, but I'm gonna put it off as long as the good Lord allows me...lol. Rest in peace & I'll see you later..., you're missed, Bro.

“ Today I understand. Yesterday I thought I understood and tomorrow I don't know. But for this moment, I understand.

Yesterday I thought I was great and important. Today I know that I'm no one yet someone. Tomorrow, maybe I'll remain the same, still as today.

Today life is a little less bitter, but not quite as sweet. Love is something to wonder, yet I've felt its touch. A smile, a frown look the same now, but both still sting.

For today I touched love and felt it slip away. I know some day we'll meet back up again. But it won't make a difference, I won't be ready for it. I never am. By Jerry Jones

“ Chris always had us laughing in school. He was quick-witted and always had a snappy comeback with a smile. My thoughts are with his family during this hard time. I wish we all lived closer and could keep up with each other more. Chris came to see me while I was at OSU, and we had such a good time catching up on highschool memories, and him telling me about his time at Cameron University. He will be missed.

“ I remember the first year Chris came to school in Elmore. He would always chase Kim and me if we “wanted to go behind the bushes” and we would scream and run!! Not sure any of us really knew what that meant at that age. I always laugh when I remember that. We couldn't have been maybe 9 years old. Chris was always guaranteed to put a smile on your face when you saw him and would lend a helping hand with my computer problems any time I called. He will definitely be missed! Prayers for the family!!

“ Chris was at Hoss/Vadas’s and stuck a needle in stomach lackadaisically like someone eating a piece of pie. I had not seen anyone do this. Kinda freaked me out. He has been a diabetic most of his life. He asked me if I thought it was safe for him to go help feed the cattle. If ur tough enough to stick a needle in ur stomach then u should be fine. Rest in piece cousin.
