“ To meet him was to know him. He was real, genuine - always right there with you. He was an attentive listener and a great conversationalist. It made us feel good just to be around him.

To know him was to love him. Although we were aware of the struggles he must face, it was never a distraction in our ability to truly see him, to see what he was, and the goodness that was there. We did not see a walking cane, we saw his face with a ready smile. He loved his family, each and every one.

We will miss him very much at the River each year. We know he will always be there in spirit and always be a part of our celebration of fishing and fellowship at the Blue River. We will never forget.##imported-begin##Lynn and Jim Kersten##imported-end##
